Wonderful wetlands

The stunning Woodberry Wetlands is set to reopen on 1 May, after being closed to the public for over 200 years. It has been transformed into an urban wetland oasis rich in wildlife

A LITTLE-known oasis for wildlife in Hackney, that has been closed to the public for more than 200 years, is set to reopen on 1 May.

Woodberry Wetlands is a £1.3million project, run by London Wildlife Trust, that has transformed East Reservoir, in Stoke Newington, into a modern nature reserve, complete with trails and signage. Thousands of square metres of reeds, hedgerow, wildflower meadows and fruit trees have been planted to coax birds – including reed buntings, song thrushes, and kingfishers – and other wildlife to the area.

After six years in the making, the regeneration of the whole site is a true labour of love, thanks to the help of 400 local volunteers. See pages 4-5.

Decision delay

THE decision over whether to approve a major redevelopment of Bishopsgate Goods Yard has been postponed.

Developers wanted to construct 12 buildings across the 11-acre site, which runs from Shoreditch High Street to Brick Lane. They ranged from 177.6 metres (47 storeys) to 24 metres (seven storeys) in height and contained mainly apartments, only 15 per cent of which would be 'affordable'.

Hackney and Tower Hamlets councils' planning committees both rejected the application but, at the request of the developers, London Mayor, Boris Johnson, took it over and was due to rule on it at a public inquiry on 18 April.

> "There is so much more potential for this site than simply the developer's ambition to cash in on luxury flats"

However, ahead of the hearing Greater London Authority (GLA) planners also recommended refusal, prompting the developers to ask Mayor Johnson to postpone the hearing so they could consider making amendments.

Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, who led a campaign against the proposals and urged Mayor Johnson to reject them, is now calling on the developers to work collaboratively with the two councils on a fundamental rethink of their plans.

He said: "The developer's proposals would have destroyed the heart of Shoreditch, cast a shadow over hundreds of nearby homes and businesses, done nothing to address London's housing crisis, stifled the growth of Tech City, and damaged forever this area's unique character and heritage.

"Virtually everyone is in agreement that the current application is entirely inappropriate for this area. Let's hope that the developers now take a creative, collaborative approach with Hackney and Tower Hamlets councils, local residents, businesses and community groups to build something that works for everyone, not just their bottom line.

"There is so much more potential for this site than simply the developer's ambition to cash in on luxury flats.

"Any future application for the Goods Yard should come back to be determined by Hackney and Tower Hamlets councils in an open and constructive way, as should always have been the case. It would be completely unacceptable for the developers to return to the GLA in a few months having simply shaved off a few floors and made some other minor tweaks.

"We welcomed the GLA planners' recommendations for refusal, which focused on concerns about shadowing and the impact on heritage sites. However, in addition to these we believe there should be much more affordable and flexible workspace, much more affordable housing provision and much better quality of design."

Missed out on getting tickets for the London 2012 Olympic Games? The world's top athletes are coming back to Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park

Re-live London 2012

RE-LIVE the magic of the London 2012 Olympic and Paralympic Games when top athletes return to Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park for the 2017 World Athletic Championships.

The IAAF World Championships and World ParaAthletics Championships are set to take place in the Olympic Stadium next summer, from 14 July to 13 August.

It is the first time that both championships will be held in the same city, in the same year, bringing together world-class athletes from over 200 countries, who will compete in 30 sessions across 20 fast-paced, action-fuelled days.

> "Some 2,000 athletes from over 200 nations will gather next summer for the IAAF World Championships"

Tickets for the 2017 World Championships go on sale on 1 August

Tickets for both events are set to go on sale from 10am on 1 August to 8.17pm on 22 August, via a ballot. Ticket prices start from as little as £5 for children and £10 for adults – with athlete-themed 'world record' ticket prices to reflect those set by athletes at previous IAAF World Championships.

IAAF President, Sebastian Coe, said: "Some 2,000 athletes from over 200 nations will gather next summer for the IAAF World Championships London 2017, which will be the biggest global championships of any sport next year."

News in brief

Don't forget to vote on 5 May

LONDONERS will take to the polls on Thursday 5 May, to vote for the next Mayor of London.

London Assembly members will also be elected, and in two Hackney wards – Stoke Newington and Hackney Downs – there will be by-elections, following the resignation of two councillors.

Polling stations will be open from 7am-10pm. Residents who have requested a postal vote will soon receive their ballot, and should ensure it is received by the Council by 10pm on 5 May.

Primary school places revealed

OVER 95 per cent of Hackney pupils have been offered a place at one of their top three preferred primaries, despite continued pressure on school places.

On 18 April, 2,619 local families found out which primary their child would be attending when they start school in September. Over 84 per cent received their first choice preference, which is above the London average of 81 per cent.

Beacon lit on top of Hackney Empire to honour Queen's 90th birthday

A SERIES of events took place across the country to celebrate the Queen's 90th birthday on 21 April.

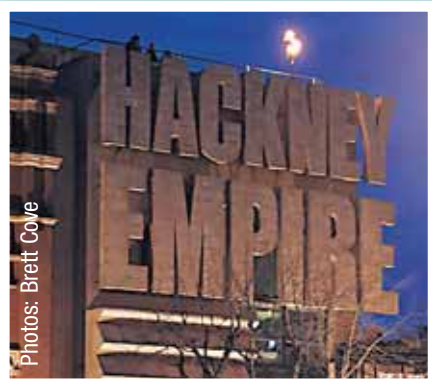

As part of the festivities to mark the longest reigning British monarch, hundreds of beacons were lit up and down the country – including in Hackney.

The Queen lit the first beacon at Windsor Castle at 7.30pm, then, at 8.30pm, the beacon on top of Hackney Empire was lit, along with 17 others in the capital.

Lieutenant Colonel Morris, Deputy Lieutenant for Hackney, and the Speaker of Hackney, Cllr Sade Etti, climbed up to the top of the Empire to light the specially built beacon at sundown. Well-wishers gathered below in the Town Hall square to celebrate the Queen's milestone birthday.

Further festivities are set to take place on the Queen's official birthday on 12 June, in the form of street parties.

The new Woodberry Wetlands is set to reopen after being closed to the public for 200 years. The reservoir has been sculpted into 17 acres of ponds connected by channels that create a rich habitat for birds and other wildlife

Walk on the wild side

Woodberry Wetlands is set to reopen to the public – after being closed for 200 years – with trails, ponds and channels harbouring new wildlife

By Harriet Worsley

IF you look that way, you could be on the Norfolk Broads," says David Mooney, gesturing across a vast and peaceful reed bed of islands, channels and ponds, through which rare birds are gliding.

He adds: "But if you turn this way..." and swings round to reveal the vast Woodberry Down Estate, including its 30-storey tower and all the cranes and digging equipment needed to construct its new neighbours. "It's London," he smiles."It's real. I love this space. This is 21st century, urban nature conservation," he says.

This is the brand new Woodberry Wetlands, a £1.3 million project run by the London Wildlife Trust that has turned a reservoir, closed to the public for over 200 years, into a modern nature reserve. The site has the conservation community so excited that Sir David Attenborough himself will officially open it on 30 April at an invite-only event.

"It's the size of 13 football pitches, but hardly anyone knew about it, isn't that mad?" says David, as he shows us around just days before the official opening. He grew up in Finsbury Park and used to cycle past the reservoir as a child, wondering about the wildlife that lay within it.

For him, and for the 400 odd volunteers who have worked on the project for the last six years, its regeneration has been a labour of love.

> "It's London. It's real... This is 21st century, urban nature conservation"

David continues: "We're all local, and from the beginning we knew two things: it had to be completely free for people to visit and we wanted it to be rooted in the community."

There will be engagement schemes and projects with nearby schools, wild yoga classes for locals, educational workshops, bat walks, nature projects, markets and more.

It is a long way off from the 1950s, when chlorine and sodium phosphate gas were pumped into the reservoir, supposedly to disinfect the water. Rather than clean it, it killed it, preventing almost all wildlife from living there.

In the 1990s, the two neighbouring East and West reservoirs were nearly sold to developers who planned to fill them in and build houses over them. Residents campaigned successfully to save them and West Reservoir became a Council-owned watersports centre.

East Reservoir continued to be a functioning Thames Water reservoir, closed to the public. Then, in 2010, the London Wildlife Trust secured funding from the Heritage Lottery Fund, Hackney Council and Berkeley Homes (who are developing the fringing estate) to begin work on its grand project. The reservoir has been sculpted into 27 acres of reed-fringed ponds and dykes connected by channels of different depths that create a rich habitat for birds and other wildlife.

Some 13,000 square metres of reeds were planted, to 'coax nature back', as David puts it, and as we walk along the boardwalks that encircle and connect them, he points to a pair of swans, building a nest from reeds.

"We're already seeing rare wading birds here that Hackney has never seen before," he continues. Reed buntings, song thrushes, and kingfishers are all flocking back.

It is not just the birds who are profiting, however. History is being preserved too. A 19th-century coal store that was subsiding has been rescued and turned into a cafe and visitors centre, with a rooftop herb garden.

Around the site, signs made by a local designer tell the story of the area: from the deer hunting that took place there in the 1600s; through to the building of the reservoirs in 1833, to bring clean water from the chalk streams of Hertfordshire to polluted London. The elegant villas that grew up around them, hosting the wealthy including, some say, F Scott Fitzgerald who enjoyed boating on the New River; to their demolition to construct 2,500 homes for the capital's poor in 1962.

A further 550 square metres of new hedgerow, wildflower meadows and fruit trees will attract birds, bees, butterflies, frogs, dragonflies and bats. But David is passionate that the site should also provide a nourishing ecosystem for local children.

"We get kids coming here who are almost scared by the reeds. They ask what it is and when we say, 'grass,' they're shocked. They think grass should look like it does on football pitches.

"We want to create that awe and wonder in the kids who live here. Everything has been designed to encourage them to explore and get hands on. There's so much they can learn. This place is for them," he says.

Rising sports stars

OVER 25 young people from Hackney have been awarded grants for their chosen sports including judo, rugby and climbing.

Since 2007, the Council's Youth Sports Fund has given over £180,000 towards the development of young athletes, with this years' grant funding totalling £18,143.

The money was awarded at a ceremony held in Hackney Marshes Centre last month. Presented by Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe, the young people, aged nine to 23, received support to help with the costs of training and competing in their chosen sport.

Lola Martinez-Rufete, 15, was awarded a silver award for her achievements in rugby. Not only was Lola selected to be a member of the ball team for the rugby World Cup 2015, but has also been selected by the England Southern Division Squad to represent them in 2016.

Lola said: "I only started playing rugby two years ago and have already come so far in such a short period of time. Rugby means a lot to me as it's something I have worked really hard to excel in and committed myself to.

"I have attended regular training sessions and events in order to reach this point and I want to continue to do so, however I need the financial support in order to do that and therefore really appreciate this opportunity as a way of aiding my future in rugby."

> "I am thrilled to receive funding which will help me attend British and European competitions"

Gold awardee, Jo Neame, 16, has been selected for the Great Britain Lead Climbing Team. Jo said: "I am thrilled to receive funding which will help me attend British and European competitions."

The fund is given to young people with sporting potential who live, or go to school in the borough. Funding is also available for community clubs that provide opportunities for young people to take part in exercise.

One parent stated that sport had a big impact on her child's life. They said: "As a result of being bullied in school, she had self-esteem and confidence issues. Being able to excel in a sport helped to overcome those issues."

Alongside individual athletes, five community clubs were also awarded funding, including The Leaside Trust, which can now train four female volunteers in the Mountain Bike Instructors Award Scheme.

Chief Executive of The Leaside Trust ,Terry Kinsella, said: "Thank you Hackney Council, the funding will help strengthen links with hard to reach communities through providing activity that helps to improve health and wellbeing and reduces barriers to participation."

Any young person who is presented with a gold or silver award will also receive a fully paid, or half price, membership respectively, at GLL-run London leisure centres, this includes Hackney's six leisure centres, which are owned by the Council and managed by GLL.

Photos from last year's Run Hackney half marathon, showing the fast, flat route which takes in many of the borough's landmarks; this year's race, on Sunday, 8 May, is set to have record numbers taking part

Keep on running

Cheer on the 15,000 Run Hackney half marathon runners set to pound the streets on 8 May

A RECORD number of runners are set to take part in this year's Vitality Run Hackney half marathon, on Sunday, 8 May.

More than 15,000 people will take part in the event's third outing, and thousands more are expected to line the streets to cheer them on.

This year's race weekend kicks off on 7 May, with a free, five kilometre course around Hackney Marshes for 2,000 local runners who are new to the sport. The main race takes place the morning after, with the 13.1 mile course starting and finishing at Hackney Marshes.

The half marathon is due to begin at 9am, with elite athletes expected to finish just after 10am. Most of the other runners should complete the course between 10.45 and 11.45am. Last year's race was won by Matthew Kimutai, with a time of 1:03:21.

Some of Hackney's younger runners will also be picking up medals

The course takes in some of the borough's most iconic landmarks, including Hackney Empire, Queen Elizabeth Olympic Park and Broadway Market.

Supporters will be able to soak up the atmosphere from spectator points along the route, where they will enjoy music, refreshments and family entertainment.

The race village, at Hackney Marshes, will also have lots going on to entertain friends and family – while they wait for their loved ones to finish the run – including yoga and exercise sessions, massages and a chill out zone.

Some of Hackney's younger runners will also be picking up medals, after completing the final leg of the Hackney Schools' Challenge. Pupils have been tasked with running a mile, once or twice a week, in order to complete 12 miles before race day. They will then complete the final 1.1 miles from 9.30am on 8 May, running the total equivalent of a half marathon.

On race day, many of Hackney's streets will be closed to traffic from 7am to create a traffic-free route. Most roads will reopen from 11.30am, and all are expected to be fully open from 2pm.

Some roads will be subject to parking suspensions from midnight on Saturday, 7 May until 2pm on Sunday, 8 May. Some local bus routes may also be affected.

Diamonds are forever

Tony and Sylvia Harvey celebrate 60 years of marriage with family and friends at a party at the Starlight Club in Fellows Court, E2; the couple on their wedding day in 1956 (inset)

By Harriet Worsley

DO you want to know the secret to 60 years of marriage?" asks Sylvia Harvey. "Don't sulk. We have plenty of arguments, but we don't sulk afterwards."

She knows what she is talking about. The 79-year-old is currently celebrating her diamond wedding anniversary with her husband Tony, 84. "I won't say it's been easy," she laughs. Adding: "But over all, it has been wonderful."

They are having a party at the Starlight Club, a seniors club in Fellows Court, E2, the estate where the couple have lived for half a century. "But he's not a local," Sylvia says, referring to the fact that, unlike her, her husband wasn't born in the borough.

She continues: "I was born here, in St Leonard's hospital and never moved away. We've had our bad times here in Hackney, but we've had some bloody good ones too."

Hackney, as she remembers, was a good place to grow up, even during the war. Sylvia recalls: "The house opposite ours was blown up completely, but we kids used it as a playground. I remember climbing down into a bunker and putting shows on down there. It was great, but it did smell."

Her other playground was Hoxton Market. Sylvia continues: "As a kid, I was always down there. It had everything you could want, a number of bakers, a choice of butchers. It was wonderful during cherry season, you could pick up huge bags of them."

After the war, her family moved into one of the many new builds that were springing up across the city. "It was near Gainsborough Studios, in Hoxton. It was like being in heaven. we'd never seen an indoor bath or loo in our lives," she recalls.

> "Our children could play out in the streets. You knew someone down the road would be watching out for them"

But it's Hackney's community she remembers most fondly. "Even after we got married, our children could play out in the streets. You knew someone down the road would be watching out for them,"she says.

Tony worked as a cabinet-maker and Sylvia as a machinist. They moved into their current flat, many storeys up, when their son – now in his 50s – was just five-years-old.

Sylvia recalls: "It was terrifying because for the first time I couldn't just let him out to play because I was miles up in the sky."

Today, the couple have 10 great grandchildren, and six of them live in Hackney. Tony muses: "They keep us very busy – they're here a lot. It's lovely but it does get noisy. Noisy but good."

The community at Fellows Court has changed too. Tony continues: "Of all the people who lived here from the start, only four others are still here."

Sylvia adds: "We're lucky to live on a good landing though, with a lovely group of people around us."

Last year, coming back from the Post Office, Tony was mugged.

"They took our pensions, but I gave him a good whack with my stick," he says, smiling drily.

"We didn't tell everyone about it," adds Sylvia. Adding: "But a while later, we got a huge surprise. A family we've grown very fond of started a collection on the internet without telling us, and raised over £500 for us because of the mugging."

Now the couple are celebrating their diamond wedding anniversary with friends, family and even a Chinese Elvis impersonator at the Starlight Club. A social group for the over 50s, the club is run by Jackie Carter and meets every Wednesday, from 1-4pm, in the estate's community centre.

"Through the club we've got to know more neighbours from the other side of the estate. We make cards or jewellery and play bingo," Sylvia says.

And the couple are also looking forward to receiving their congratulatory card from the Queen for 60 years of marriage together. We could all learn a thing or two from this couple...

Cordwainer Gardens (main) and Dalston Eastern Curve were among the gardens to get involved in the Big Dig

Residents dig deep

HACKNEY got its hands dirty on 16 April, as locals pulled on their gardening gloves and got involved in Big Dig Day.

Organised by Capital Growth, London's largest food growing network, the annual event aims to encourage volunteers to help out in local community gardens.

"Many Londoners don't have access to their own gardens so this is a great chance to get outdoors and learn the basics," said Maddie Guerlain from Capital Growth. Adding: "And for those who already have an allotment or garden, there were workshops and advice to take away."

> "The Big Dig is a great chance to get outdoors and learn the basics"

Small gardens across the borough opened their gates to new visitors, some seasoned horticulturalists, and others who were picking up a spade for the first time.

At the Dalston Eastern Curve Garden, E8, Big Dig Day saw the launch of a project to develop a children's area with natural play facilities.

Volunteers helped to cut back shrubs, move logs, and prepare the area for planting to create a show-stopping display for garden visitors to enjoy in the coming weeks.

On Mabley Green, E9, volunteers were busy planting shrubs and fruit bushes as well as sowing seeds to encourage a rich bio-diverse habitat.

At Cordwainer Gardens, E8, flax was sown to create thread while the Wilton Estate Food Growing Space, E8, hosted activities including seed planting, crafts and talks about the garden. Proving that, in Hackney at any rate, food really is making the journey from estate to plate.

News in brief

Canal campaign calls for old-fashioned manners on paths

CYCLE along the Regent's Canal and you might be surprised to find yourself instructed to 'smile and say 'hi' as you go by' or reminded that you are in 'a hat tipping zone'. But after a local stretch of the towpath was designated a special 'polite zone', these messages are beginning to appear more frequently.

Some 60 million visits were made to London towpaths last year, and as the number of cyclists, boaters, anglers and pedestrians rises, the Canal & River Trust has introduced a campaign to encourage users to use the space amicably. The 'Share The Space, Drop Your Pace' campaign calls for a re-introduction of 'old-fashioned manners' and the stretch of canal from City Road Lock, in Islington, to Kingsland Road Basin, in Hackney, has come under particular scrutiny.

It has been named a 'polite zone' with messages sprayed onto the towpath to encourage gentlemanly (or womanly) behaviour.

Jon Guest, manager of Canal & River Trust's waterways in London, said: "For many people our towpaths are 'super slow ways', providing a slice of peace and calm through the centres of our busiest cities."

Youngsters get up on the catwalk to promote eco-friendly real nappies

TODDLERS took to the catwalk on 20 April to show off a collection of eco-friendly nappies created by Hackney parents.

The fashion show, at the Round Chapel, was part of a series of events to mark Real Nappy Week, from 18 to 24 April. Some of the designs on display were created by parents in an earlier workshop.

Real nappies save money and the environment. Although they are cheaper in the long run, the initial cost can be an obstacle, so Real Nappies for London is offering vouchers up to £54 to help families switch.

Anyone living in Hackney with a baby under 18 months can apply online.

Switching to real nappies can save families up to £1,200 per baby, and prevent 6,000 nappies from going to landfill. By choosing real nappies over disposables, families could make up to a 40 per cent carbon saving.

Boroughs across London could save an annual total of 200,000 tonnes of waste and £20million (on the cost of waste disposal alone).

Modern, reusable nappies are shaped and designed so there's no need to fold and pin them. They can be washed at low temperatures using eco-friendly detergents.

Do you have an idea for a New Social Enterprise but need funding to set up?

The Beyond Business Programme, Bromley by Bow Centre are offering start up funding for new or emerging Social Enterprises across Tower Hamlets, Hackney and Newham. The Social Enterprise must be located in those Boroughs

What is the Beyond Business Programme?
Beyond Business has already launched a network of 60 plus successful Social Enterprises in the East End and provides:
- Start up funding,
- Strategic and business planning guidance, and
- Practical business support including training, mentoring and pro-bono legal services.

Is my idea for a Social Enterprise eligible?
- To be eligible for a start up grant of up to £17,000 your idea for a Social Enterprise must:
- Have a clear social purpose and outcomes, such as employment for people with barriers to work, youth training, healthy living and local environment improvements.
- Have a sound business proposition and the potential to be financially sustainable without reliance on grant funding.
- Be able to legally set up and start trading by end January 2017.

How will Applicants be assessed?
- Stage 1: Applicants submit an expression of interest form for a panel review.
- Stage 2: Applicants successful at Stage 1 will be invited for an interview.
- Stage 3: Applicants successful at Stage 2 complete a business plan, with support from the Beyond Business team.
- Stage 4: Applicants successful at Stage 3 present their business idea and plan to an independent Dragons' Den panel on 27th September 2016 - funding then approved for successful applicants.

Need an expression of interest form?
Please contact: Kim Hayman, Beyond Business, Bromley by Bow Centre, St Leonard's St, E3 3BT
Telephone: 020 8709 9722
Email: kimh@bbbc.org.uk

The closing date for Submission of Expressions of Interest is 5pm 31st May 2016.

Antartica

4-6 May, Shoreditch Town Hall, 380 Old St, EC1V 9LT

ANTARCTICA is the coldest, windiest, driest place in the world whereas, says the artist Chris Dobrowolski: "I've always found East London audiences to be very warm and welcoming."

It is perhaps surprising then, that he is bringing the two together, with a three night run of his show 'Antarctica' at Shoreditch Town Hall. For three months, Dobrowolski joined the British Antarctic Survey as their artist in residence, living and working alongside the scientists, medical professionals, researchers and crew members, attempting to experiment creatively whilst also trying to survive in an extreme environment. His one-man performance lecture is a humorous romp through that experience, in which he discovers that it can be very difficult to justify your position as an artist whilst everyone around you is a hero. Even if you can build a sledge out of gilt picture frames (pictured above).

"I'm looking forward to performing at Shoreditch Town Hall in Hackney for three days," says Dobrowolski. And, after hearing his tales of encounters with cannibalistic ducks in Artic temperatures, we can see how a three day stint in Shoreditch might look appealing.

Competition

Win tickets to watch Richard II at the Arcola Theatre, Dalston

A NATION in uproar. A leader in crisis. An unlikely successor waiting in the wings... It isn't hard to imagine why the latest production of Shakespeare's 'Richard II' was first staged at the House of Commons, and just how attentive an audience it must have found there.
On the 400th anniversary of the Bard's death, Tim Delap and Hermione Gulliford play the main characters in this gripping political thriller, transferring to the Arcola Theatre following its premier at Westminster.
This bold new staging uses Shakespeare's original text but transplants it to modern Britain, bringing it to life with a starry cast more used to treading the boards of the National Theatre and the West End. They will be in Hackney for just one week, but you can enter Hackney Today's competition to win a pair of tickets.
"I wasted time, and now doth time waste me," says Richard II. Don't you make the same mistake...
Richard II is staged at The Arcola Theatre from 3-7 May. Tickets are £19 with £15 concessions. For more information visit: www.arcolatheatre.com

Hackney Today is giving away a pair of tickets to the show. Send your entry to Richard II competition, Hackney Today, Communications, 1st Floor, Maurice Bishop House, 17 Reading Lane, E8 1NN; or e-mail: htnews@hackney.gov.uk by 12pm on 29 April. Submissions must include an address and contact number. Winners will be pulled out of a hat.

PREVIEW

Persuasion

4-22 May, Rosemary Branch Theatre, N1 3DT

"I HATE to hear you talk about all women as if they were fine ladies instead of rational creatures. None of us want to be in calm waters all our lives." Jane Austen's final heroine, Anne Elliott, may have been written 200 years ago, but she can still speak like a modern feminist. Now, a new adaption of 'Persuasion', at the Rosemary Branch Theatre, is bringing the novel to life for modern audiences, placing fresh emphasis on its main character's inner world and emotions.

Anne Elliot is on the shelf. Unmarried at 28, her prospects look glum.

Then the man with whom she broke off an engagement eight years ago re-enters her life and kicks off a chain of events that challenge her pretentions, those of her family, and that of the entire society around her.

Tickets range from £10 to £14.

The Weekender at Stour Space

26-30 May, Stour Space, 7 Roach Rd, E3 2PA

HACKNEY Wick warehouse Stour Space already offers exhibition, performance and studio space for socially minded, creative businesses. Now, it is offering lubrication too. A brand new bar opens on 26 May and to celebrate, the venue is hosting a weekend of art, music, poetry, film and performance, all absolutely free.

The Weekender runs from 26 to 30 May, and Demdike Stare, two of the UK's finest experimental composers, are headlining on Saturday with an exclusive all-night set. Other music acts include a live performance from the incredible 10-piece London Afrobeat Collective, as well as Afriquoi (pictured) and Lobster Theremin.

Music aside, there's Bring your Own Beamer on Thursday evening, in which artists are invited to bring their own work and projectors. Portraits of Hackney Wick – snapshots of the area's artists – will be exhibited on Sunday, alongside film screenings and an arts market.

Throughout the weekend, meanwhile, there will be open studios and workshops covering subjects from sound engineering to screen-printing. And of course when you need a breather, just head upstairs to the bar and take in the views across the River Lea and into the Olympic Park.

Go Johnnie go, go, go

A HACKNEY student has been crowned a British Schools National Judo Champion after taking the sport up just three years ago.

Johnnie Grant, who studies at BSix Sixth Form College, first tried judo while at Petchey Academy. He went on to train at Queensbridge Sports and Community Centre where he enrolled in The Yellow Belt Challenge.

Run by The Fighting Chance Project – a British Judo partnered programme – the challenge aims to engage young people in the sport, encouraging their confidence and performance both academically and within the sport.

> "My favourite part about the sport is that I get to compete and express myself"

Johnnie's victory in the under 60kg category for Years 11 and 12 at the British Schools Championships on 2 April also meant that he secured the final 10 points needed to gain his black belt.

Hackney Judo Club head coach, Calvin Walker-Hall, said: "This was an amazing achievement for him as not only did he win all contests by ippon – the highest score a fighter can achieve – but also accumulated the last 10 points needed for his black belt, making him the highest grading Fighting Chance graduate, and Hackney Judo Club's first ever home grown black belt."

Explaining how he first got into judo, Johnnie said: "I always wanted to do a martial art and I saw an opportunity and went for it. My favourite part about the sport is that I get to compete and express myself. I also get to meet new people and make great friends."

Johnnie has already competed at a number of other competitions including the London Youth Games, Kent International and Southend International.

News in brief

Stormont House WW1 project

AN award-winning theatre company has joined forces with local schoolchildren, Hackney Museum and Hackney Archives to produce an exhibition of historic proportions.

The Stormont House Hospital project explores the history of the E5 site, which is now Stormont House School for children with special educational needs.

During the First World War however, the building was requisitioned as an auxiliary hospital and run by the Red Cross. Exactly 100 years later, pupils worked with theatre company Fifth Word to explore what life was like for those based at the building at that time, thanks to a grant of £59,400 from the Heritage Lottery Fund.

Using material from Hackney Museum and Archives, the young people investigated the effect of war on the nurses and soldiers who occupied their building, as well as the local area, through role play.

Their work has contributed to an exhibition at Hackney Museum, from 28 April to 16 July. It will then transfer to Hackney Downs Pavilion, from 13 to 21 August.

Awards for The City Academy

THE City Academy, Hackney, has received three awards following the exceptional results it achieved last year.

The school, which opened in 2009, won recognition from the Schools, Students and Teachers network (SSAT) which is the UK's largest such body.

SSAT found that the grades achieved by the Homerton school's pupils put it in the top 10 per cent of non-selective schools across the country, and the top 10 per cent nationally for progress made by pupils between key stage 2 and key stage 4 results.

A third award recognised the school's success in enabling pupils to fulfil their potential.

Mandeville primary pupils treated to healthy cookery lessons by top chef

MASTERCHEF met Mandeville Primary School, E5, when Year 6 pupils were treated to cookery lessons by a celebrated food writer.

Rosie Birkett visited the school on 18 April to talk to students, who are about to sit their SATS exams, about the importance of healthy eating to help them concentrate on learning.

Her visit was organised by Magic Breakfast, the national charity providing free, healthy breakfasts to 23,500 vulnerable children in 480 schools each day.

Research by Cardiff University has found a link between children eating a good breakfast and doing well in exams, while teachers who work with the charity report that pupils who eat their nutritious breakfasts are more alert and improve their educational attainment.

Rosie talked about eating a healthy breakfast before overseeing a practical cooking lesson. She said: "I believe every child has the right to eat breakfast. It's so important to their health."

Year 6 pupil, Sami Boumerdassi, whose cookery during the session was singled out for particular praise, said: "The lesson taught me that I should eat the pineapples my dad buys me now."

It's electrifying!

The first ever London GIRL Kart Grand Prix took place on 8 April, with two Hackney teams participating

HACKNEY girls tore up the tracks in a race to find the next 'fastest woman in the world'.

The first ever London GIRL Kart Grand Prix on 8 April was organised by charities London Play, with support from Dare to be Different, a non-profit organisation set up by the former top women's racing car driver, Susie Wolff.

London Play has been running a similar event for both sexes for four years, called Go Kart Build and Race. But communications manager, Fiona Sutherland, said: "Sometimes we see the girls hanging back. We know that girls are more than capable of taking the driving seat and with this event there is nothing to stop them unleashing their technical, practical and creative talents, as well as their inner speed demons."

> "Showing girls that motor sport – on and off the track – is a great hobby, or even career, is powerful"

The HM Go-Jetters took the top prize for 'best dressed kart'

At this single sex competition, 13 teams comprised of girls from playgrounds and play schemes across London, included two representing Homerton Grove and Hackney Marsh adventure playgrounds.

They were given four hours to design and construct a kart from a pile of wood, wheels and metal before racing it.

'The HM Go-Jetters', as the team from Hackney Marsh Adventure Playground named themselves, took the top prize for 'best dressed kart'. They went on to win their heat and make it into the finals of the event.

Susie handed out the prizes, including a day out at Buckmore Park Karting Track for the winning team.

She said: "Showing girls that motor sport – on and off the track – is a great hobby, or even career, is powerful. It's something I'm very passionate about."

Train to be in TV production

AN innovative youth project is set to provide eight weeks' worth of free 'boot camp' style training in television production.

The scheme, for 18 to 30-year-olds, is run by MAMA Youth Project in partnership with Creative Skillset, and aims to develop participants' skills in camera operation, lighting, sound recording and production. It is an opportunity to make a 52-minute TV show about current affairs, covering issues related to young people.

When the course ends, MAMA Youth Project will offer trainees further information and support about other work experience in the industry.

The course will run from 22 July to 16 September. To be eligible to apply, candidates must live in Hackney, Islington, Tower Hamlets, Waltham Forest or Newham.

The deadline for applications is 15 June.

BFI premier of teen's film work

A BUDDING young filmmaker from Hackney has been handpicked by leading movie industry figures to have her work premiered at the British Film Institute (BFI).

Patrycja Cygan was one of just 66 students, aged 16 to 19, whose films were shown on 8 April in front of an audience of industry giants, including producers Alison Owen and Duncan Kenworthy.

Patrycja worked as a cinematographer on 'AA503', a film about a malfunctioning robot.

The graduate group were chosen from those involved in BFI Film Academies, run annually across the country.

Now in its fourth year, the scheme aims to give talented young people a real chance to join the film industry, whatever their backgrounds.

Take a trip down memory lane with free #REMIX21 music festival

FREE tickets to an exciting festival for young people celebrating art, music, theatre, fashion and dance are up for grabs.

The #REMIX21 festival is set to take place at Rich Mix on 10 May, with the aim of taking young people on a cultural journey through the past 21 years of music.

Highlights of the evening will include a live 90s-themed catwalk, a countdown to the millennium and a celebration of the 2012 Olympic Games.

Spoken word artists will produce time specific pieces while visual artists will do live video mixing and 3D mapping. Dancers and performers will also showcase their dynamic acts.

Event host and performer, Simple Jackson, said: "I am super hyped for this event and excited to represent the last 21 years of music – it is one not to be missed!

"We have handed over the creative direction to some very talented young people who are going to put on the most entertaining show."

#REMIX21, in collaboration with the National Lottery, is looking for creative people, aged 18 to 25, who want to perform in front of an audience of 500 and access expert music industry support. To apply, visit: lotterygoodcauses.org.uk/remix21

New health funding

Duckie received £30,000 from the Council's Healthier Hackney Fund to set up a weekly entertainment and social club for older people called Posh Club

OVER £250,000 in funding has been awarded by the Council to 24 new health and wellbeing projects in the borough.

The Healthier Hackney Fund was launched last September and supports community and voluntary organisations to lead innovative projects to tackle some of Hackney's most complex health challenges.

Around £140,000 from the fund has been allocated to five projects to tackle substance misuse, or promote positive sexual health. Some £120,000 will go to nine organisations to test new ideas to tackle the wider causes of obesity, or develop community resilience to health and social issues. And just under £10,000 will be awarded to 10 community groups kick-starting neighbourhood projects that encourage residents to be healthy.

> "To see the changes in the young people throughout the project is a really fulfilling experience"

This is the second year of the Healthier Hackney Fund, and some projects that tested out new ideas last year have secured money to put these into action.

Tahnee Braithwaite, project lead for youth sexual health charity Brook, was awarded funding last year. She said: "To see the changes in the young people throughout the project is a really fulfilling experience. We are looking forward to delivering our new project."

Other projects launched this month include Shift Design, which is researching how to improve the healthiness of takeaway food in Hackney; City and Hackney Carers Centre, which is developing phone-based support for carers to discuss healthy weight; and MISGAV, which is running gym sessions for Orthodox Jewish women with physical or learning disabilities.

Projects continuing their efforts in the community include charity Terrence Higgins Trust for its sexual health work with men who use Abney Park as a public sex environment; and LGBT artist collective Duckie, which set up an entertainment and social event for older people called Posh Club, which has secured funding from other sources.

Applications for next year open from September.

News in brief

Dementia-friendly businesses

LOCAL businesses are being invited to declare their support for those with dementia.

The Hackney Dementia Action Alliance (HDAA) is behind a drive to encourage local businesses and organisations to sign up to the National Dementia Declaration (NDD), identifying their business as a dementia friendly place that meets the organisation's guidelines.

There are an estimated 1,200 people living with dementia in Hackney. HDAA aims to give them a voice, spread better awareness and reduce the stigma around the disease.

HDAA's official launch will take place at Hackney Central Library, E8, on 29 April. A number of free activities are planned for the day, between 11am and 4pm, including mindful yoga, reminiscence workshops and a virtual tour of Hackney Museum. A dementia-friendly screening of 'An American in Paris' will also be shown at Hackney Picturehouse between 11am and 1pm.

For more info visit: www.dementiaaction.org.uk; or e-mail: phil.cowley@alzheimers.org.uk

Leyton Orient's latest signing

LEYTON Orient Football Club is training up some players with an unusual profile. They are all aged 30 to 65 and have little to no experience. In fact, they have just one thing in common: diabetes.

The Football Fans in Training programme is designed to encourage and support men with diabetes to manage their condition and improve their health.

The 12-week free scheme, funded by Hackney CVS will be held at the Matchroom Stadium every Thursday from 19 May to 4 August. Each lunchtime, from 1 to 3pm, participants will be trained by club coaches. What fan could resist?

For more information e-mail: phillip.smith@leytonorienttrust.org; or call: 020 8556 5973.

St John Ambulance gives free life-saving lessons

SOME 1,000 young people across the borough will get to learn life-saving skills through a new collaboration between the UK's leading first aid charity and an engineering company.

Funding from Babcock International Group has allowed St John Ambulance to introduce a series of first aid training courses in Hackney, aimed at 16 to 18-year-olds.

Mary Smith, Schools and Community Projects Manager for St John Ambulance, said: "This will bring long lasting benefit to local communities as all the young people trained will have the skills and confidence to intervene in a life or death situation. None of us knows when we could be faced with a serious medical emergency. Knowing how to save a life is one of the most valuable lessons anyone can learn."

The first aid training sessions range from two-hour courses focusing on bleeding and bandaging, to full day courses covering resuscitation and other essential life saving skills, such as dealing with choking, shock, burns, fainting and chest pain.

St John Ambulance is now inviting teachers across Hackney to get in touch.

To enrol a school in the scheme, call: 020 7258 7075; or e-mail: schools.communities.london@sja.org.uk

From pillar to post

By Sally England

THIS year the Royal Mail is celebrating its 500th birthday, marking the anniversary of Henry VIII knighting Brian Tuke, the first Master of the Posts, in 1516.

Hackney has a little-known connection with this long history, having been associated in the mid-1850s with the development of the first public sign of the age of modern communications: the post box.

Boxes for depositing messages have been in use for centuries all over the world, but France was the first country to introduce a system of roadside boxes situated away from a post office. This was followed in the early 1850s with the introduction of similar boxes in the Channel Islands at the instigation of the Post Office Surveyor's Clerk, Anthony Trollope.

The system was successful, and gradually rolled out across mainland Britain over the following years. London's turn came in 1854 when Rowland Hill, Secretary to the Post Office, asked the Treasury for permission to erect six experimental cast iron boxes on a line running from Ludgate Hill to Piccadilly.

This was approved and Hill contacted the French authorities to ask for details of the postal boxes used in Paris. These were sent on to the Post Office's Engineer, E A Cowper, to help him design the London version.

Cowper's design was approved by the Postmaster-General in January 1855 and unveiled to the public in early April. Known as the Standard Letter Box, the rectangular boxes stood five feet above ground and were topped with a large iron ball. There was no standard colour although unobtrusive, darker tones were favoured, unlike today's easily spotted pillar box red.

> "It is much less ornamental than the Paris pillar. Our Letter-box is a stove-like design"

The six London boxes were cast at H and MD Grissell's Regent's Canal Iron Works in Eagle Wharf Road, Hoxton. Henry Grissell, nicknamed 'Iron Henry', started the business in 1841 with his brother Martin De La Garde Grissell, and worked with some of the great engineers of the time.

The projects included the ironwork for major bridges in Britain and abroad, various lighthouses, the Covent Garden Opera House Floral Hall, the roof of London Bridge Station, and the gates for both Buckingham Palace and the British Museum.

When iron bridges were required for the Regent's Canal itself, it was inevitably Grissell's who made them. Some survive today, and the company's name can still be seen from the towpath passing below.

Cowper was very pleased with the boxes he and Grissell's had produced, but those who actually used them were less happy, finding them squat and ugly. The Illustrated London News felt that 'it is much less ornamental than the Paris pillar. Our Letter-box is a stove-like design, reminding one of the latest of the London conduits…'

The architectural journal 'The Builder' described the boxes as 'lamentable instances of the absence of that guiding artistic power which the country has had, and still has, in its own pay and at its command, if the Government chose to avail itself of such service…' It didn't help that the information notice plates were so low down that they were readable only if 'the reader kneels on the pavement'.

Just a year after the introduction of London's first post boxes, a change of design was called for. Fifty new boxes were to be cast and three iron foundries were invited to tender for the contract, including Grissell's. The cheapest, from Smith and Hawkes, was accepted, and so ended Grissell's – and Hackney's – association with the evolution of the post box.

Sadly, no example of a Grissell's post box remains today. One did survive in a London contractor's yard along with other early boxes, awaiting preservation, but these were destroyed when the yard was hit by a bomb during the Blitz of the Second World War.

Grissell's business at Eagle Wharf Road continued for another decade, until the banking crisis of 1866 forced Henry to close the foundry. He died in January 1883, aged 65, and was buried in Norwood Cemetery in an ornate galvanised cast iron family tomb, itself probably made at the Regent's Canal Works.

The Mayor and councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections took place in May 2014.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services. They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern. Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – see map below.

MAYOR JULES PIPE

Hackney has an executive Mayor, Jules Pipe, who is not a councillor, but is directly elected by the entire borough.

The Mayor is the political leader of the Council, overseeing the budget and all Council services. Civic and ceremonial duties are undertaken by the Speaker of Hackney who is elected annually from among the borough's 57 councillors. The current Speaker is Cllr Sade Etti.

Recipes straight from the ovens at Waterhouse

www.waterhouserestaurant.co.uk

THIS is the latest in a series of regular recipes courtesy of Waterhouse – an eco-friendly restaurant alongside the Regent's Canal in Shoreditch.
Chef Rebekah Wright chooses her favourite dish, buttermilk chicken with macaroni and cheese, because, she says: "Although this dish sounds really posh, it's actually really simple – it is fried chicken with mac and cheese. The difference is it's made with buttermilk, which is an ingredient that helps the bread crumbs combine with the chicken so is stays in place, and it gives it more flavouring."

Buttermilk chicken with macaroni and cheese

Serves 4

Preparation time 40 mins

Cooking time 1 hour, 30 mins (1.5)

Ingredients

- 4 pieces of chicken breast
- 2 tsp cajun seasoning
- 2 tsp all spice
- 1 tsp chilli powder
- 1 tsp peri peri seasoning
- 500ml buttermilk
- Salt, to taste
- Pepper, to taste
- Bread crumbs.

For the mac and cheese

- 250g macaroni pasta
- 200g grated cheese
- 1 red and 1 green pepper
- 1 onion
- 1 egg
- 2 spring onions
- 2 cloves of smoked garlic
- 100ml cheesy sauce
- 1 tbsp all-purpose seasoning
- 1 tbsp thyme.

Method

- Preheat the oven to 180°C. Flatten the chicken breasts using a rolling pin, and add the cajun seasoning, all spice, chilli powder, peri peri seasoning, buttermilk, salt and black pepper. Mix it together then leave it to marinate in the fridge for an hour (or overnight if possible)
- Put the macaroni pasta on to boil. While it is cooking, prepare the rest of the ingredients: dice the onions, red and green peppers and spring onions; cut the thyme; and crush the smoked garlic. Leave aside
- Drain the pasta and put it back in a pot, on a low heat. Add the above ingredients, all-purpose seasoning, grated cheese, cheesy sauce, an egg and mix it all together
- Allow to simmer, then place it all in a tray, add a sprinkling of cheese to the top and bake for 30/40 mins on 180°C
- In the meantime, remove the marinated buttermilk chicken breasts from the fridge and cover each piece in bread crumbs. Fry for approximately 1 minute on each side
- Place on a tray in the oven for 15/25 mins on 180°C to cook the inside of the chicken. Add the mac and cheese to the plate, season to taste and serve.

Waterhouse - through Blue Marble Training - supports young people across the borough towards careers in the restaurant industry. Owned by Shoreditch Trust, income from this enterprise goes back into training programmes in the borough. Waterhouse in Orsman Road, N1, is open Mon to Fri, 9am - 3pm. Evenings and weekends available for large bookings and private events.
